

My comment reflects concern over the loss of FM translator signals. In Northern Colorado, I listen to K-LOVE radio on 91.1 FM which is also sent to Wyoming and the Western slope by translator signal.

A change in FCC policy may result in the loss of those signals.

K-LOVE radio provides a public service in Fort Collins and surrounding communities, including Wyoming, with programming not found on other radio stations available locally. The loss of K-LOVE's signal would be to the detriment of local programming in our area.

K-LOVE's programming follows their motto of "positive, encouraging", family oriented, Christian based, music and news NOT FOUND on other area radio stations. When traveling to Wyoming or Steamboat Springs I can still receive the K-LOVE signal through the translator service and still be assured of the same quality of programming. I am concerned not only with the loss of K-LOVE's signal, but also the loss of the high standard of programming K-LOVE adheres to.

I strongly urge the FCC NOT to make changes that will adversely affect the translator signals which carry K-LOVE's programming to outlying communities. Thank You.
